MOUNT MARKETING

SAMPLE CASE STUDY

Marketing foundations for a specialist engineering team.

A fictional sample showing how Mount Marketing could create steadier content, better sales assets and a clearer rhythm of communication for a small technical business.

BUSINESS

NorthForge Process Systems

SECTOR

Process engineering and system integration

SUPPORT

Monthly content planning and reusable sales assets

Photo source: Mikael Blomkvist / Pexels

Sample work: This is a fictionalised example created to show what steady monthly support could look like before Mount Marketing has a live client portfolio.

The Challenge

NorthForge Process Systems had the technical expertise buyers wanted, but marketing only happened in bursts. LinkedIn activity was inconsistent, there was no repeatable process for turning projects into proof, and sales follow-up often relied on whatever information happened to be available at the time.

The business needed a practical monthly structure that would improve visibility without creating more overhead for a small team.

The Approach

Mount Marketing created a simple monthly content rhythm based on recurring themes, likely buyer questions and existing technical knowledge inside the business. That was supported by reusable assets for follow-up, case study adaptation and internal content planning.

The emphasis was consistency over volume: useful marketing output the business could realistically sustain.

Deliverables

- Monthly content planning structure
- LinkedIn content themes and sample post drafts
- Case study adaptation framework
- Sales follow-up copy and proof prompts
- Monthly review notes and next-step recommendations

The Outcome

The business gained a steadier way to stay visible, turn technical expertise into content, and support sales conversations with stronger proof. Instead of starting from scratch each month, the team had a repeatable structure that reduced friction and made the marketing workload feel more manageable.

It also created a clearer bridge between business development activity and marketing output.

> "We no longer need to reinvent the wheel every time we want to show up, follow up or explain our value."
>
> Sample stakeholder quote for a fictionalised case study

Sample case study for Mount Marketing. Replace this page later with a real long-term support story when available.